THE mission of Sir ANDREW CLARKE to Siam appears likely to bear good fruit by leading to the early construction of railways in that country. Fitted by nature to become the great rice granary of the East Siam is in a most undeveloped state owing to its want of facilities for communication with the interior. In spite, however, of this drawback, Bangkok exports immense quantities of rice, timber, and other produce. The existing prosperous trade, created by the advent of steamers and intercourse with foreign countries; serves to show what may be expected to follow the opening up of the vast and almost unknown interior by, means of the iron road. The success which has attended the railway in Lower Burman is further index to the result of the experiment in Siam. Burmah possesses in the noble river Irrawaddy magnificent water communication right up from Rangoon to Bhamo. Yet although the railway followed almost the same course, it not only at once became successful, but did so without diminishing sre of no interest at the present date we forbear the traffic on the river by the Irrawaddy Florilla Company's boats. BEFORE MR. A. J. LEACH, ACTING PUISNE JUDGE.

YEUNG CHEUK HUI AND OTHERS v. KU HUNG

Mr. Ewens appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Wotton for the defendant. The hearing of this case was commenced on Thursday and was now continued. The point in dispute between the parties was the quality of certain Australian coal bought by defondant from the plaintiffs but rejected as being inforing to the coal contracted for.

Mr. E. J. Hughes was e lied on the last occasion and gave evidence as to selling the rejected coal by auction. He said he had bad considerable experience in judging coal, and he considered this good coal.

Mr. Andrew Johnson, who had made a survey of the coal, described it is pretingly Australian He distinguished between best and ordinary, and said this was ordinary.

The plaintiff spoke as to what the contract was. He denied that anything more than Australian coal was ordered, but he admitted in pross-examination that the charge he had made was the highest price payable for Australian coal then on this market, and he claimed that the coal he had supplied was the best obtainable.

The defendant was called and said he contracted with the defendant for the best Australian coal and agreed to pay the top price, $7.50 a ton. and $6 for the Takasima. The Australian coal was not the best, but the Takasima might be of the first quality. H. Carmichael, the chief ongineer of the Dafila, the steamer to which the coal was supplied, said that after a portion of the cool had been taken on board he saw it was not pure Australian coal but was mixed with Japanese or Chinese or some other coal of inferior quality, that he stopped taking it on board and went down into the lighter and inspected it there, and saw that it was mixed. He then rejected the balance and also the Takasima conl. When at sea and they came on the 21-tons. of this coal that had been passed into the bunkers before the rejection took place, they found by the steam produced that it was inferior coal From a sample bag of the alleged Australian coal, produced by the plaintiff, the witness picked several pieces of Japanese and other coal which he could not describe, but which he asserted vere not Australian.

W. Taylor, the second engineer, gave corr Asau, the head fireman, supported the statements of the previous witnesses as to the bad burning properties of the coal. Another Chinese witness was called to give

Mr. Wotton, for the defendant, contended that the contract was for the best Australian and best Takasima; that the more receipt of the 21 tons was not an acceptance of the contract and did not debar the defendant from rejecting the remainder, when he found the Australian coal was not of the quality agreed upon, and on this point he contended the evidence given for the defence was much stronger than that on the other side. With reference to the law as to the rejection of goods contracted for after a portion had been taken delivery of he cited the cases of Harb v. Mille, 15 Meeson and Welsby, 85, and Tarling v. O'Riorden, 2 Irish Law Reports, 82 C.A., and several other cases.

Mr. Ewens, in reply, quoted copiously from Benjamin on Sales, and contended that the contract was substantially fulfilled by the plaintiff, that the contract was for the best Australian coal, but that that did not mean picked coal but the best obtainable in lots, and that the coal was of the quality agreed upon was shown by the price it realised at the forced auction sale. Mr. Wotton said that as to the latter point his Lordship would have to be satisfied that the coal was knocked down to a bona fide parchaser before he could give it any weight. Mr. Ewens said that it had not been denied by any evidence called for the defence that the sale was bond fide.

THE ALLEGED INDECENT ASSAULT CASE. The hearing of the case in which Charles Frederick Dawkes, a private of the 58th Reginent, was charged with indecently assaulting Road, was resumed. Mr. Bowles (for Mr. Wotton) appeared for the presecution, and Mr. Webber for the defence. Mr. Webber said he did not propose to offer any further evidence in the case. His Worship committed the prisoner for trial. Mr. Webber said he did not know whether his Worship would fix any bail, supposing it could be arranged.

His Worship said he was willing to hear what was to be said on that point. Mr. Webber said that of course the bail the prisoner could find would not be a heavy bail It was too late to take the case at this month's secsions, which would commence on Monday, because the prisoner must have two clear days. notice; there would not be time to instruct counsel, and, besides, the counsel the prisoner would have
